INTRODUCTION

MODLITWA GDY DZIATKI SPAĆ IDĄ ('A prayer when the children go to sleep') is an evening hymn in four six-line stanzas by Andrzej Trzecieński the Younger, set for four voices by Wacław z Szamotuł. Łazarz Andrysowicz printed it in Kraków as a booklet of four leaves. The print is undated. It belongs with Andrysowicz's other prints of Wacław's Polish songs, which are placed between 1550 and 1556.

The title page names no composer. The letters W and S stand after the final notes of the Tenor, Altus and Bassus, and that monogram is the evidence for Wacław's authorship. Michał Wiszniewski described the print in 1844 as '4 kart. Z nutami na 4 tony W. S.' ('4 leaves. With notes for 4 voices. W. S.')

The setting is a cantional song. The Tenor carries the hymn tune in breves and semibreves, one note to each syllable. The other voices move around it more freely, with melismas on stressed syllables and a clausula at the end of most lines. The tune also appears on its own, unattributed, in Jan Seklucjan's Pieśni chrześcijańskie dawniejsze i nowe (Königsberg, 1559). Whether Wacław wrote it or arranged an older tune is disputed: Mazurkiewicz takes it for his, Hławiczka for an older song.

No copy of the print is known today. In 1880 Kazimiera Przyborowska published a facsimile of it in Warsaw, 'z pierwodruku' ('from the first printing'), and every later edition goes back to that facsimile. The usual modern editions transpose the piece up a minor third, halve the note values, add a three-flat signature and modernise the text. This edition gives the music at the pitch and in the note values of the print, draws the bar lines between the staves only, and keeps the old forms of the text.

THE SONG AND ITS USE

The title says what the song is for. Luther's Small Catechism (1529) ends with prayers that 'ein Hausvater sein Gesinde soll lehren' ('a head of household should teach his household'), among them an evening blessing for bedtime: 'denn ich befehle mich, meinen Leib und Seele und alles in deine Hände. Dein heiliger Engel sei mit mir, daß der böse Feind keine Macht an mir finde.' ('for I commend myself, my body and soul and all things into your hands. Let your holy angel be with me, that the wicked enemy may find no power over me.') Polish Lutherans took this over directly. The second edition of Jan Seklucjan's Catechismus (Königsberg, 1549) closes with a Nauka dziecienna, a teaching for children, which tells them how to begin and end the day:

'Idąc spać mają dać dobrą noc swoim starszym, a niż się układają, mają się naprzód przeżegnać ... [i] te modlitwę mogą przydać: Wszchemogący Ojcze niebieski, dziękuję Tobie ... iżeś nas tego dnia raczył we zdrowiu zachować i wszelkiej szkody uchronić ... a przeto my ciała swoje i dusze i inne wszystkie rzeczy w ręce Twoje polecamy, aby Twój święty anioł był przy nas, aby dyabeł żadnego prawa do nas nie miał.'

('When going to sleep they are to bid their elders good night, and before they lie down they are first to cross themselves ... [and] they may add this prayer: Almighty heavenly Father, we thank you ... that you have deigned to keep us in health this day and to preserve us from all harm ... and therefore we commend our bodies and souls and all other things into your hands, that your holy angel may be with us, that the devil may have no claim on us.')

Trzecieński's third and fourth stanzas put this prayer into verse almost clause by clause. The holy angel is sent against the enemies of the soul; God is asked to keep the household 'przez wszej szkody' ('without any harm') and from every sudden 'przygoda' ('mishap'); everything the household has is put into his care. The song is the catechism's evening prayer, made singable for the family.

Behind both stands Compline, the old night office, which the household prayer replaced. Its texts are close to Trzecieński's first stanza. The short lesson warns that 'adversarius vester diabolus tamquam leo rugiens circuit' ('your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, goes about'); the hymn Te lucis asks 'hostemque nostrum comprime' ('and hold back our enemy'); Psalm 90 promises safety 'a negotio perambulante in tenebris' ('from the thing that walks about in the dark’); the collect asks God to drive off ‘omnes insidias inimici’ (‘all the snares of the enemy’) and to let his holy angels keep the house in peace. The parallel is my own reading; I know of no study that makes it.

The hymnals show the song in this domestic use. Zaremba’s Calvinist Pieśni chwał boskich (‘Songs of God’s praises’; Brest, 1558), printed for Mikołaj Radziwiłł, Wacław’s patron, has the text, in a book that also contains Jakub Sylwiusz’s Pasterstwo domowe, an order for prayer and singing in the household. Seklucjan’s hymnal of 1559 prints the tune among eight songs headed ‘Idąc spać’ (‘Going to sleep’). Agnieszka Leszczyńska has suggested that Wacław wrote partly with young singers in mind, since the Tenor’s plain tune could go to the least practised voice.

Trzeciecki (c. 1525 – after 1584) was a Kraków humanist and a leader of the Reformation in Little Poland, a friend of Kochanowski and one of the translators of the Brest Bible (1563). He knew Wacław well. He wrote verses in praise of him for the Lamentationes (1553) and, after the composer’s death, an elegy, De obitu Venceslai Samotulini (‘On the death of Wacław of Szamotuły’).

EDITORIAL METHOD

This edition follows the rules of the series, set out in the guide Editorial principles and cited here by number. What follows is particular to this piece: its choices and its departures.

Pitch, values and barring. As in Ⓐ: final D, no signature, no reduction of note values, and the print’s cut-C. A bar is one breve, the tactus of cut-C. The incipits are those of Ⓐ, and the final longae are Ⓐ’s (principles 5.7).

Clefs and voices. The voice names are those of Ⓐ. Altus and Tenor use the octave-transposing treble clef. Written ranges: Cantus c’–d”, Altus d–a’, Tenor d–e’, Bassus G–a.

Accidentals. Ⓐ prints none, so every accidental here is editorial. They raise the cadences where a sixth opens to an octave, in bars 2, 4, 9 and 29. The fifth such cadence, bar 19, is left as printed. Two signs are optional: a sharp in bar 4 (Cantus) and a flat in bar 29 (Altus) (principles 7.2).

Underlay. (A) prints each voice's text as a block under the staff, so the underlay is editorial. Three things in (A) guide it. The Tenor's text fits its notes exactly, one syllable to a note. Where (A) spaces the words of the Cantus and Bassus apart, it leaves room for a melisma. The line breaks of the other voices give only a rough guide. Elsewhere the series rules apply (principles 10.1–10.9). Where they leave a choice, I weigh the words against the line (principles 10.6). The syllable that carries a line takes its melisma or its high point (PO-moc, CZAR-tów, chy-TRO-ści); a light word such as o or nas takes one or two notes. The voices do not always change syllable together. At the two main cadences the Cantus comes a minim after the Tenor and Bassus: nas o-bro- in bars 19–20, chy-tro- in bars 28–29.

Text. (A) prints four stanzas and 'Dokończenie' ('The end'), with no Amen. All four are sung to the same music. Old Polish verse counts syllables, eight to the line with a break after the fourth, but not stresses, which fall in different places from stanza to stanza. Stanzas 1 and 2 are underlaid, since most performances sing one or two, and each has its own underlay where the other's would put a melisma on a light syllable: Cantus lines 1, 2, 4 and 6, Altus line 3, Bassus lines 1 and 3. So the Cantus sings PA-nie and pie-KIEL-ne in stanza 2, WIECZ-ny PO-kój where stanza 1 has CZAR-tów nas. At the last cadence stanza 1 spreads swej over three minims, so that chy-tro- trails the lower voices; stanza 2 gives the run to wo-, so that -ta- falls on the leading note. Stanzas 3 and 4 follow the score and take the notes of stanza 1 syllable for syllable. The transcription uses modern spelling and punctuation but keeps the old sounds and forms: zmierzka, naszem, strażem, nawiecej, wszytki, swoję, Jesu, raczysz, wszej, jenż. The diplomatic text keeps the spelling and line division of (A), with ſ, and ē unexpanded.

Już się zmierzka, nadchodzi noc,
 poprośmy Boga o pomoc,
 aby on naszym strażem był,
 od złych czartów nas obronił,
 którzy nawięcej w ciemności
 używają swej chytrości.

Jesu Kryſte, Panie miły,
 tyś wszystkie piekielne siły
 przez mękę swoją poraził,
 a nam wieczny pokój sprawił.
 Raczysz, miłosierny Panie,
 wysłuszyć nasze wołanie.

Ześli anioła świętego,
 aby mocą bóstwa twego
 przed dusznymi przeciwniki
 bronił nas, two służebniki,
 i zachował przez wszej szkody
 od każdej nagłej przygody.

Tobieć wszystko poruczamy,
 cożkolwiek w swej mocy mamy;

 jesteś Królem wiekuistym.

*Dusk is falling, night is coming;
 let us ask God for help,
 that he may be our guard
 and defend us from the evil devils,
 who most of all in the dark
 put their cunning to use.*

*Jesus Christ, dear Lord,
 by your passion you struck down
 all the powers of hell
 and won us eternal peace.*

*Deign, merciful Lord,
 to hear our cry.*

*Send a holy angel,
 that by the might of your godhead
 he may defend us, your servants,
 from the enemies of the soul,
 and keep us without any harm
 from every sudden mishap.*

*To you we commend
 whatever we hold in our power;
 what you have lent us of your grace,
 let it be in your care,
 who with the Father and the Holy Spirit
 are King everlasting.*

CRITICAL NOTES

(P_{WM}), (K) and (M) transpose up a minor third, halve the values, bar in 4/4 and use a signature of three flats. Their readings are given here at the pitch and in the values of this edition. Bar numbers agree in all four.

BAR	VOICE	NOTE
1–2	A	(P _{WM}) splits the dotted minim f' so that 'się' has a note of its own. (A) has one dotted minim; 'się' falls on the following e'.
4	C	(P _{WM}) raises the semiminim g' as well as the cadential minim; (K) and (M) raise the minim only. Here the minim is raised and the semiminim, a lower neighbour to a', has an optional sharp.
8–10	A, T	(M) exchanges the two parts, 'for tessitura'. (A) has the semiminims c' b a g and the descent f e d in the Altus.
8–9	A	(P _{WM}), (K): 'ga' on the semiminim c', 'o' on f. Here 'ga' on f and 'o' on e, so that 'pomoc' falls with the Cantus and Tenor.
12–13	C, B	Parallel fifths d'–g' over g–c. They stand in (A).
13–16	C, A, B	Rising octaves inside one syllable (principles 10.6).
15–17	C	(P _{WM}), (K), (M): 'złych' on the semiminim g', bar 17. Here on b', bar 16 (principles 10.1). 'Czar-' takes the leap c'–c'' and its run, 'tów' e' f', so that 'nas o-bro-' falls on g' a' g# as 'chy-tro-' does at the final cadence. Stanza 2: 'wicz-' c', 'ny' the run, 'spra' a'.
19	C	g' left as printed: the minor sixth b–g' gives a softer close at the middle of the stanza than the raised cadences around it.
23	A	(K), (M): 'cej' on the second semiminim a. Here on the dotted minim c' (principles 10.1).
27–29	C	(P _{WM}), (K), (M) put 'jā' on the e' of bar 27. Here 'jā' c' and 'swej' d', bar 28, each with the minim after it; 'chy-' the semibreve d' and 'tro-' c#, a minim after the other voices. (A) leaves a gap after 'Vzywā', which keeps the e' of bar 27 within the melisma. Stanza 2: 'na-' c', 'sze' d', 'wo-' e' and the semibreve d', 'ła-' c#.
28	A	(M): 'jā' on the second semiminim c'. Here on the dotted minim e' (principles 10.1).
29	A	(P _{WM}), (K) and (M) flatten b (una nota super la). Left as in (A): bb would sound a tritone against e' in the Cantus, and b is the sixth degree of the D mode. The flat is printed in brackets as an option. A KEPT.
30	B	(A) has a maxima, given as a longa to match the other voices.
text		(P _{WM}): 'zmierzcha', 'naszym stróżem'. (K), (M): 'naszym strażem'; (M) 'zmierzcha'. All three print 'On' with a capital. (A): 'zmyerzka', 'nássem strażem', 'nawyęcęcy', 'on'.
